What Is 40 Days?

For ten years I fought for justice in Massachusetts and in federal courts from Boston to Northern California. I won two appeals—only to realize the lower court would never fairly decide the facts and law. At that point, I dismissed my own case, knowing the system was rigged against truth.

To test whether my story was just personal bias or something deeper, I did what Congress should require every court to do: I asked an independent, legally-trained AI to review the actual court filings—mine and my opponents—on a purely factual and legal basis.

The results were unmistakable:

- In every major motion, the AI found that the legal standards were clear, my filings met them, and my opponents either broke the rules or offered no valid defense.
- Even when judges were made aware of these failures—sometimes with evidence of fraud, sometimes with no opposition at all—the rulings still went against the facts, the law, and, by any neutral standard, common sense.
